Title of your paper: Methanol Application and Soil Water Content: Increase Production and Cultivation of Soybean Plants

Corresponding Author's Email Address: zulkifli.maulana@universitasbosowa.ac.id

Author(s): Zulkifli Maulana; Andi Muhibuddin; Andi Tenri Fitriyah; Rachmawaty; Haeruddin Saleh; Abdul Karim

Keywords: methanol application; groundwater use; production; soybean cultivation

Abstract: Soybean cultivation can increase its production by providing methanol and groundwater. This research aims: (1) to analyze the application of methanol to increase soybean production, (2) to analyze soil water content to increase soybean production, and (3) to analyze the interaction between methanol and soil water content to increase soybean production. The research was carried out from June to October 2022 in Pangkajene District, Pangkep Regency, South Sulawesi, Indonesia. The research used a split plot design and each treatment was repeated three times. The first plot is the level of water content which consists of 3 levels, namely A1: 25-50 %, A2: 50-75 %, and A3: 75-100%, while the subplot is the methanol concentration which consists of 4 levels, namely Mo: no methanol, M1: 15% methanol, M2: 30% methanol and M3: 45% methanol. The research results show that soil water levels of 75-100% and methanol 30% have a good influence on growth components and production components. Providing methanol can increase water use efficiency.
